Contents Volume 20:1 March 1997

Glenberg, Arthur M. What memory is for 1

Open Peer Commentary

Anderson, N. H. Functional memory versus reproductive memory 19
Benjamin, A. S. & Bjork, R. A. Problematic aspects of embodied memory 20
Carlson, R. A. Meshing Glenberg with Piaget, Gibson, and the ecological self 21
Crowder, R. G. & Wenk, H. E. Glenberg's embodied memory: Less than meets the eye 21
De Vega, M. Embodiment in language-based memory: Some qualifications 22
Franklin, S. Action patterns, conceptualization, and artificial intelligence 23
Gärdenfors, P. The role of memory in planning and pretense 24
Graesser, A. C. Where is the body in the mental model for a story? 25
Habel, C., Kaup, B. & Kelter, S. Embodied representations are part of a grouping of representations 26
Jacobs, A. M. & Ziegler, J. C. Has Glenberg forgotten his nurse? 26
Koriat, A. & Goldsmith, M. The myriad functions and metaphors of memory 27
Logie, R. H. What working memory is for 28
MacDorman, K. F. Memory must also mesh affect 29
MacLeod, C. M. Is memory caught in the mesh? 30
McNamara, T. P. Semantic memory 30
Musen, G. Is memory like understanding? 31
Nelson, K. Functional memory: A developmental perspective 32
Ramsay, J. T. & Homer, B. Against suppression and clamping: A commentary on Glenberg 33
Regier, T. What is modeling for? 34
Rossetti, Y. & Procyk, E. What memory is for action: The gap between percepts and concepts 34
Schwartz, D. A., Ivancich, J. E. & Kaplan, S. Suppression, attention, and effort: A proposed enhancement for a promising theory 36
Slater, C. Conceptualizing a sunset ≠ using a sunset as a discriminative stimulus 37
Solomon, K. O. & Barsalou, L. W. Productivity and propositional construal as the meshing of embodied representations 38
Velichkovsky, B. M. The "mesh" approach to human memory: How much of cognitive psychology has to be thrown away? 39
Vickers, D. & Lee, M. D. Towards a dynamic connectionist model of memory 40

Author's Response

Glenberg, A. M. What memory is for: Creating meaning in the service of action 41

Clark, A. & Thornton, C. Trading spaces: Computation, representation, and the limits of uninformed learning 57

Open Peer Commentary

Berkeley, I. S. N. Taming type-2 tigers: A nonmonotonic strategy 66
Bullinaria, J. A. Constraining solution space to improve generalization 67
Chater, N. What is the type-1/type-2 distinction? 68
Damper, R. I. Parity is not a generalisation problem 69
Dartnall, T. Epistemological missing links 70
Dominey, P. F. Reducing problem complexity by analogical transfer 71
Elton, M. Cognitive success and exam preparation 72
Gaskell, M. G. Type-2 problems are difficult to learn, but generalize well (in general) 73
Golden, R. M. Model-based learning problem taxonomies 73
Haberlandt, K. Trading spaces: A promissory note to solve relational mapping problems 74
Halford, G. S. Recoding can lead to inaccessible structures, but avoids capacity limitations 75
Kurtz, K. Informed learning and conceptual structure: Putting the "birdness" back in the bird 75
Leiser, D. The dynamics of cumulative knowledge 76
Marcus, G. Extracting higher-level relationships in connectionist models 77
Memmi, D. Data coding takes place within a context 77
Oberlander, J. Of ants and academics: The computational power of external representation 78
Ohlsson, S. Old ideas, new mistakes: All learning is relational 79
Skokowski, P. Neural computation, architecture, and evolution 80
Stufflebeam, R. S. Why computation need not be traded only for internal representation 80
Szilas, N. & Shultz, T. R. Prospects for automatic recoding of inputs in connectionist learning 81
Vinter, A. & Perruchet, P. Relational problems are not fully solved by a temporal sequence of statistical learning episodes 82
Wells, A. Evolution's gift is the right account of the origin of recoding functions 83

Authors' Response

Thornton, C. & Clark, A. Relational learning re-examined 83

Mele, A. R. Real self-deception 91

Open Peer Commentary

Ainslie, G. If belief is a behavior, what controls it? 103
Audi, R. Self-deception vs. self-caused deception: A comment on Professor Mele 104
Bach, K. Thinking and believing in self-deception 105
Barnden, J. A. Deceived by metaphor 105
Baumeister, R. F. & Leith, K. P. Biased steps toward reasonable conclusions: How self-deception remains hidden 106
Bermudez, J. L. Defending intentionalist accounts of self-deception 107
Bornstein, R. F. Varieties of self-deception 108
Brown, S. L. & Kenrick, D. T. Paradoxical self-deception: Maybe not so paradoxical after all 109
Dalgleish, T. Once more with feeling: The role of emotion in self-deception 110
Dupuy, J.-P. It may require another person to deceive oneself 111
Foss, J. E. How many beliefs can dance in the head of the self-deceived? 111
Freeman, W. J. Self, awareness of self, and the illusion of control 112
Friedrich, J. Is real self-deception really all that biased? 113
Gergen, K. J. Detecting deception 114
Gibbins, K. Partial belief as a solution to the logical problem of holding simultaneous, contrary beliefs in self-deception research 115
Gorassini, D. R. Intentional self-deception can and does occur 116
Heilmann, M. Self-deceived about self-deception: An evolutionary analysis 116
Johnson, E. A. Real ascriptions of self-deception are fallible moral judgments 117
Kirsch, I. Hypnotic responding and self-deception 118
Krebs, D., Ward, J. & Racine, T. The many faces of self-deception 119
Lazar, A. Self-deception and the desire to believe 119
Lockard, J. S. Distal versus proximal mechanisms of "real" self-deception 120
Losonsky, M. Self-deceivers' intentions and possessions 121
Martin, M. W. Self-deceiving intentions 122
Perring, C. Direct, fully intentional self-deception is also real 123
Rachlin, H. & Frankel, M. The uses of self-deception 124
Sackeim, H. A. & Gur, R. C. Flavors of self-deceptions: Ontology and epidemiology 125
Schmidt, C. T. Pragmatically pristine, the dialogical cause of self-deception 126
Talbott, W. J. Does self-deception involve intentional biasing? 127

Author's Response

Mele, A. R. Understanding and explaining real self-deception 127

Continuing Commentary

On Kenrick, D. T. & Keefe, R. C. (1992) Age preferences in mates reflect sex differences in human reproductive strategies. BBS 15:75–133. 137

Einon, D. Individual differences in age preferences in mates: Taking a closer look 137
Over, R. & Phillips, G. Differences between men and women in age preferences for a same-sex partner 138

Authors' Response

Kenrick, D. T. & Keefe, R. C. Age preferences in mates: An even closer look, without the distorting lenses 140

On Block, N. (1995) On a confusion about a function of consciousness. BBS 18:227–287. 144

Bogen, J. E. An example of access-consciousness without phenomenal consciousness? 144
Bringsjord, S. Consciousness by the lights of logic and commonsense 144
Browne, D. Two conceptions of access-consciousness 147
Chalmers, D. J. Availability: The cognitive basis of experience 148
Gamble, D. P-consciousness presentation/A-consciousness representation 149
Gilman, D. Consciousness and mental representation 150
Güzeldere, G. & Aydede, M. On the relation between phenomenal and representational properties 151
Mangan, B. Empirical status of Block's phenomenal/access distinction 153
Noë, A. Perception and content 154
Pöppel, E. Consciousness versus states of being conscious 155
Rosenthal, D. M. Phenomenal consciousness and what it's like 156 van der Heijden, A. H. C., Hudson, P. T. W. & Kurvink, A. G. On widening the explanatory gap 157

Author's Response

Block, N. Biology versus computation in the study of consciousness 159

Contents Volume 20:2 June 1997

Saunders, B. A. C. & van Brakel, J. Are there nontrivial constraints on colour categorization? 167

Open Peer Commentary

Abramov, I. & Gordon, J. Constraining color categories: The problem of the baby and the bath water 179
Bornstein, M. H. Selective vision 180
Braisby, N. & Franks, B. Semantics versus pragmatics in colour categorization 181
Brill, M. H. When science fails, can technology enforce color categories? 182
Broackes, J. Could we take lime, purple, orange, and teal as unique hues? 183
Byrne, A. & Hilbert, D. R. Unique hues 184
Costall, A. "Colour science" and the autonomy of colour 185
Davidoff, J. & Roberson, D. Empirical evidence for constraints on colour categorization 185
Davies, I. R. L. Colour-cognition is more universal than colour-language 186
Dedrick, D. Colour categorization and the space between perception and language 187
Dubois, D. Cultural beliefs as nontrivial constraints on categorization: Evidence from colors and odors 188
Foss, J. Mad about hue 189
Gellatly, A. Cultural practice and perception 189
Hardin, C. L. Color-order systems: A guide for the perplexed 190
Hubey, H. M. Logic, physics, physiology, and topology of color 191
Ingling, C. R. Constraints on the definitions of "unique hues" and "opponent channels" 194
Jameson, K. A. What Saunders and van Brakel chose to ignore in color and cognition research 195
Kay, P. & Berlin, B. Science ≠ Imperialism: There are nontrivial constraints on color naming 196
MacLaury, R. E. Ethnographic evidence of unique hues and elemental colors 202
Mausfeld, R. J. Why bother about opponency? Our theoretical ideas on elementary colour coding have changed our language of experience 203
McManus, I. C. A monochrome view of colour 204
Miller, D. L. Over the rainbow: The classification of unique hues 204
Poortinga, Y. H. & Van de Vijver, F. J. R. Is there no cross-cultural evidence in colour categories of psychological laws, only of cultural rules? 205
Ross, P. W. Trichromacy and the neural basis of color discrimination 206
Simpson, C. The irrelevance of the psychophysical argument 207
Sokolov, E. N. Four-dimensional color space 207
Stanlaw, J. Making light of keeping color categories in the dark: Some arguments against Saunders and van Brakel's notions of trivial constraints in color nomenclature 208 van Kruysbergen, N. W. H., Bosman, A. M. T. & de Weert, C. Universal colour perception versus contingent colour naming: A paradox? 209
Van Laar, D. Ekphrasis in colour categorisation: Time for research, or time for revolution? 210
Werner, J. S. & Bieber, M. L. Hue opponency: A constraint on colour categorization known from experience and experiment 210
Zegura, S. L. Color categories and biology: Considerations from molecular genetics, neurobiology, and evolutionary theory 211

Authors' Response

Saunders, B. A. C. & van Brakel, J. Colour: An exosomatic organ? 212

Braitenberg, V., Heck, D., & Sultan, F. The detection and generation of sequences as a key to cerebellar function: Experiments and theory 229

Open Peer Commentary

Arbib, M. A. & Spoelstra, J. Microcomplexes: The basic unit of the cerebellar role in adaptive motor control 245
Bjaalie, J. G. & Brodal, P. Anatomical substrates for cerebellar computational units and cerebellar magnification factors 246
Bower, J. M. What do parallel fibers do? 247
Chauvet, G. A. Cerebellar Purkinje units - basic functional elements of movement control 247
Courchesne, E. Prediction and preparation: Anticipatory role of the cerebellum in diverse neurobehavioral functions 248
Dufossé, M., Kaladjian, A., & Grandguillaume, P. Origin of error signals during cerebellar learning of motor sequences 249
Garwicz, M. & Andersson, G. Is the tidal wave necessary? Is it likely? 250
Grethe, J. S. & Thompson, R. F. Cerebellar involvement in movement timing on a variety of timescales 250
Harvey, R. J. Patterns of organisation in the cerebellum and the control of timing 251
Jaeger, D. & De Schutter, E. Anatomical structure alone cannot predict function 252
Kadar, E. E., Shaw, R. E., & Turvey, M. T. Path space integrals for modeling experimental measurements of cerebellar functioning 253
Lidierth, M. Branching of cerebellar parallel fibres can assist the convergence of mossy fibre input sequences that are temporally and spatially dispersed 254
MacKay, W. A. Why a sequence mode if synchronization would fit the cerebellum better? 255
McCollum, G. More precise beam logic implied by cerebellar—motor coherence 255
Mechsner, F. & Palm, G. Is the cerebellum essentially a precise pattern matching device? 257
Meek, J. The cerebellum and timing: Lessons from mormyrids 258
Miall, R. C. Sequences of sensory predictions 258

Molinari, M. & Petrosini, L. Is sequence-in/sequence-out a cerebellar mode of operation in cognition too? 259
Morasso, P. & Sanguineti, V. Learning tidal waves versus learning sensorimotor mappings 260
Paulin, M. G. The propagation of errors in sequences of cerebellar theories 261
Poppele, R. E. & Bosco, G. Distribution of activity in the cerebellar cortex resulting from passive limb movement 262
Roberts, P. D. Stochastic recruitment in parallel fiber activity patterns 263
Schwarz, C. Spatio-temporal constraints of the tidal wave theory 264
Shaw, R. E., Kadar, E. E., & Turvey, M. T. The job description of the cerebellum and a candidate model of its "tidal wave" function 265
Topka, H. & Dichgans, J. The cerebellum and the physics of movement 266
Trillenberg, P. & Wessel, K. Detection of input sequences in the cerebellum: Clinical and neuroimaging aspects 267

Authors' Response

Braitenberg, V., Heck, D., & Sultan, F. Waiting for the ultimate theory of the cerebellum 267

Plamondon, R. & Alimi, A. M. Speed/accuracy trade-offs in target-directed movements 279

Open Peer Commentary

Bootsma, R. J. & Mottet, D. Dynamics of trajectory formation and speed/accuracy trade-offs 303
Carlton, L. G. & Liu, Y-T. Speed/accuracy relations: The kinetic–kinematic link and predictions for rapid timing tasks 304
Chua, R. & Elliott, D. Visual control of target-directed movements 304
De Jong, W. P. & Van Galen, G. P. Are speed/accuracy trade-offs caused by neuromotor noise, or not? 306
Desmurget, M., Prablanc, C. & Rossetti, Y. Kinematic theory: From numerical fitting to data interpretation 307
Gielen, C. C. A. M. How do neuronal and muscle-mechanical properties contribute to the performance of the "delta lognormal" model? 308
Goodman, S. R. Accuracy and variability of the movement in Fitts' and Schmidt's laws 309
Grossberg, S. Neural models of reaching 310
Hancock, P. A. & Verwey, W. B. Where in the world is the speed/accuracy trade-off? 310
Herrmann, U. & Soechting, J. F. Neuronal and muscular correlates consistent with Plamondon's theory: Velocity coding and temporal activation patterns 311
Heuer, H. What is Fitts' law about? 312
Holly, J. E. Individual data and clear assumptions about movement 313
Latash, M. L. & Schöner, G. Flawed kinematic models cannot provide insight into the nature of motor variability 314
MacKay, W. Segregation of agonist and antagonist systems minimizes the benefits of polarity 315
MacKenzie, C. L. & Graham, E. D. Separating A and W effects: Pointing to targets on computer displays 316
Mitnitski, A. B. Kinematic models cannot provide insight into motor control 318
Morasso, P. & Sanguineti, V. Movement dynamics in speed/accuracy trade-off 319
Phillips, J. G., Bellgrove, M. A. & Bradshaw, J. L. Predicting relationships between speed and accuracy of targetting movements is important 319
Sherwood, D. E. Speed/accuracy trade-offs in rapid and simultaneous and sequential actions: Evidence for carryover effects 320
Stelmach, G. E. & Thomas, J. R. What's different in speed/accuracy trade-offs in young and elderly subjects 321
Sternad, D. & Newell, K. M. Modeling movement variability in space and time 322
Thomassen, A. J. W. M. & Meulenbroek, R. G. J. Do we need an encompassing speed/accuracy trade-off theory? 322
van Wieringen, P. C. W. & Beek, P. J. Distance versus position information in the control of aiming movements 323
Wright, C. E. & Meyer, D. E. The delta-lambda model: "Yes" for simple movement trajectories; "no" for speed/accuracy tradeoffs 324
Zelaznik, H. N. & Proctor, R. W. Can one explanation serve two laws? 325

Author's Response

Plamondon, R. The kinematic theory: A new window to study and analyze simple and complex human movements 325

Continuing Commentary

On Karmiloff-Smith, A. (1994) Précis of Beyond modularity: A developmental perspective on cognitive science. BBS 17:693-745. 351

Bonatti, L. How far beyond modularity? 351
Browne, D. Putting knowledge to work 353
Spensley, F. Beyond representational redescription 354

Author's Response

Karmiloff-Smith, A. Promissory notes, genetic clocks, and epigenetic outcomes 355

On Davey, G. C. L. (1995) Preparedness and phobias: Specific evolved associations or a generalized expectancy bias? BBS 18:289-325. 361

Cuthbert, B. Selective associations and associative learning: Multiple mechanisms, multiple measures 361 de Jong, P. J. & Merckelbach, H. No convincing evidence for a biological preparedness explanation of phobias 362

Author's Response
Davey, G. C. L. The merits of an experimentally testable model of phobias 363

On Rachlin, H. (1995) Self-control: Beyond commitment. BBS 18:109-159. 365

Ainslie, G. & Gault, B. Intention isn't indivisible 365
Leiber, J. Psychology without brains 366

Author's Response
Rachlin, H. The teleological science of self-control 367

Contents Volume 20:3 September 1997

Roberts, B., Cordo, P. & Harnad, S. Controversies in Neuroscience V: Persistent pain: Neuronal mechanisms and clinical implications. Introduction. iii

Berkley, K. J. Sex differences in pain 371

McMahon, S. B. Are there fundamental differences in the peripheral mechanisms of visceral and somatic pain? 381

Dickenson, A. H. Plasticity: Implications for opioid and other pharmacological interventions in specific pain states 392

Coderre, T. J. & Katz, J. Peripheral and central hyperexcitability: Differential signs and symptoms in persistent pain 404

Wiesenfeld-Hallin, Z., Aldskogius, H., Grant, G., Hao, J.-X., Hökfelt, T. & Xu, X.-J. Central inhibitory dysfunctions: Mechanisms and clinical implications 420

Blumberg, H., Hoffmann, U., Mohadjer, M. & Scheremet, R. Sympathetic nervous system and pain: A clinical reappraisal 426

Open Peer Commentary

Backonja, M.-M. The neural basis of chronic pain, its plasticity and modulation 435

Baron, R. & Jänig, W. Complex regional pain syndromes: Taxonomy, diagnostic criteria, mechanisms of vascular abnormalites, edema, and pain 437

Benedetti, F. The sensory and affective components of pain 439

Binik, Y. M. Pain, pleasure, and the mind 440

Birbaumer, N. & Flor, H. A leg to stand on: Learning creates pain 441

Brody, S. Vaginas yield far more pleasure than pain 442

Clarke, R. W. More inhibition and less excitation needed in the fight against pain 443

Cleland, C. L. & Gebhart, G. F. Does central nervous system plasticity contribute to hyperalgesia? 444

Devor, M. Central versus peripheral substrates of persistent pain: Which contributes more? 446

Elam, M. Is reflex sympathetic dystrophy a valid concept? 447

Ellermeier, W. On separating pain from the willingness to report it 448

Gijsbers, K. & Niven, C. A. Psychobiological sex differences in pain: Psychological as much as biological 449

Gracely, R. H. Persistent pain: Trim the branches or fell the tree? 449

Han, J.-S. Cholecystokinin (CCK): Negative feedback control for opioid analgesia 451

Hardcastle, V. G. Pains are in the head, not the spine 451

Hole, K., Svendsen, F. & Tjølsen, A. Is learning involved in plasticity in nociceptive regulation? 452

Hu, J. W. & Sessle, B. J. Central excitatory and inhibitory mechanisms and neuroplasticity are also manifested in trigeminal nociceptive pathways 453

Janscó, G., Dux, M. & Sántha, P. Role of capsaicin-sensitive afferent nerves in initiation and maintenance of pathological pain 454

Kupers, R. Sex differences in pain: And now for something completely different 455

Lautenbacher, S. Is there a sex difference in the balance of pain excitatory and pain inhibitory processes? 456

Malliani, A. The requirements of a major biological hypothesis 457

Marchettini, P., Lacerenza, M. & Formaglio, F. Experimental pain models and clinical chronic pain: Is plasticity enough to link them? 458

Menétrey, D. Visceral pain and gender differences in pain 459

Munafo', M. Associative learning and pain? Why stop there? 459

Noble, F., Maldonado, R. & Roques, B. P. Physiological antagonism between endogenous CCK and opioid: Clinical perspectives in the management of pain 460

Omote, K. Are intrinsic inhibitory systems activated or inhibited in pathological pain states? 461

Raja, S. N. & Wesselmann, U. Sympathetically maintained pain: Confusing classification, ill-defined diagnostic criteria, and puzzling pathophysiology 462

Roberts, W. J. Sympathetic nervous system and pain: Phenomenological diversity 463

Rollman, G. B. Sex differences in pain do exist: The role of biological and psychosocial factors 464

Siddall, P. J. Central inhibitory dysfunctions in neuropathic pain: What is the relationship between basic science and clinical practice? 465

Stein, C. & Schäfer, M. Novel peripheral mechanisms of opioid analgesia 465

Sternberg, W. F. Sex differences in descending pain modulatory pathways may clarify sex differences in pain 466
Unruh, A. M. Why can't a woman be more like a man? 467
Urban, L. A. Sympathetic component of neuropathic pain: Animal models and clinical diagnosis 468
Ursin, H. Sensitization: A mechanism for somatization and subjective health complaints? 469
Watkins, L. R. & Maier, S. F. The case of the missing brain: Arguments for a role of brain-to-spinal cord pathways in pain facilitation 469
Wesselmann, U. Gender differences: Implications for pain management 470
Willis, Jr., W. D. Central sensitization following intradermal injection of capsaicin 471

Authors' Responses

Berkley, K. J. Female vulnerability to pain and the strength to deal with it 473
Dickenson, A. H. Pains, brains, and opium 479
Coderre, T. J. & Katz, J. What exactly is central to the role of central neuroplasticity in persistent pain? 483
Wiesenfeld-Hallin, Z. No brain, no pain 486
Blumberg, H., Hoffman, U., Mohadjer, M. & Scheremet, R. Sympathetic contribution to pain – need for clarification 487

Continuing Commentary

On Farah, M. J. (1994) Neuropsychological inference with an interactive brain: A critique of the "locality" assumption. BBS 17:43–104. 515

Benson, P. J. The fragility of the locality assumption: Comparative evidence 515
Bischof, H. Locality, modularity, and computational neural networks 516
Crusio, W. E. Neuropsychological inference using a microphrenological approach does not need a locality assumption 517
Foster, J. K. The "locality assumption": Lessons from history and neuroscience? 518
Goel, V., Nichelli, P. & Grafman, J. What is the locality assumption and how is it violated? 519
Hardcastle, V. G. ERPs and the modularity of cognitive processes 520

Author's Response

Farah, M. J. More interactions on the interactive brain 521

On Mealey, L. (1995) The sociobiology of sociopathy: An integrated evolutionary model. BBS 18:523–599. 525

Stoltenberg, S. F. Heritability estimates provide a crumbling foundation 525
Cruz, J. L. H. Simulation and the psychology of sociopathy 525
Stein, D. J. Sociopathy: Adaptation, abnormality, or both? 527

Author's Response

Mealey, L. Heritability, theory of mind, and the nature of normality 527

On Latash, M. L. & Anson J. G. (1996) What are "normal movements" in atypical populations? BBS 19:55–106. 532

Kadar, E. E. & Turvey, M. T. Process based functionalism instead of structural functionalism is needed 532

Author's Response

Latash, M. L. & Anson, J. G. Does controlling movement require intelligence? 533

Contents Volume 20:4 December 1997

Quartz, S. R. & Sejnowski, T. J. The neural basis of cognitive development: A constructivist manifesto 537

Open Peer Commentary

Barton, R. A. Neural constructivism: How mammals make modules 556
Bickerton, D. Constructivism, nativism, and explanatory adequacy 557
Black, J. E. & Greenough, W. T. How to build a brain: Multiple memory systems have evolved and only some of them are constructivist 558
Blanzieri, E. Dynamical learning algorithms for neural networks and neural constructivism 559
Bolhuis, J. J. Learning, development, and synaptic plasticity: The avian connection 559
Dehaene-Lambertz, G. & Dehaene S. In defense of learning by selection: Neurobiological and behavioral evidence revisited 560
Elliott, T. & Shadbolt, N. R. Neurotrophic factors, neuronal selectionism, and neuronal proliferation 561
Estes D. & Bartsch, K. Constraining the brain: The role of developmental psychology in developmental cognitive neuroscience 562
Feldman, J. A. Radical empiricism is not constructive 563
Finlay, B. L. So many problems, so little time: Evolution and the dendrite 564
Foss, J. Irresistible environment meets immovable neurons 565
Grossberg, S. Neural models of development and learning 566
Haith, G. Processing limitations can help neural growth build hierarchical representations 566
Hurford, J., Joseph, S., Kirby, S. & Reid, A. Evolution might select constructivism 567
Innocenti, G. M. "Differentiationism" can reconcile selectionism and constructivism 568
Johnson, M. H., Bates, L., Elman, J., Karmiloff-Smith, A. & Plunkett, K. Constraints on the construction of cognition 569
Kennedy, H. & Dehay, C. Cortical development: A progressive and selective mesh, with or without constructivism 570
Mareschal, D. & Shultz, T. R. From neural constructivism to children's cognitive development: Bridging the gap 571
McCollum, G. More mathematics: bodily-kinaesthetic intelligence 572
Purves, D. Neural construction: Two and a half cheers for Quartz & Sejnowski! 573
Raijmakers, M. E. J. Is the learning paradox resolved? 573
Reeke, Jr., G. N. Constructivism: Can directed mutation improve on classical neural selection? 574
Scheibel, A. B. The right way, the wrong way, and the army way: A dendritic parable 575
Scholl, B. J. Neural constraints on cognitive modularity? 575
Sporns, O. Deconstructing neural constructivism 576
Székely, G. Learning is remembering 577

Authors' Response

Quartz, S. R. & Sejnowski, T. J. Controversies and issues in developmental theories of mind: Some constructive remarks 578

Shors, T. J. & Matzel, L. D. Long-term potentiation: What's learning got to do with it? 597

Open Peer Commentary

Abraham, W. C. Keeping faith with the properties of LTP 614
Bramham, C. R. State-dependent suppression of LTP induction after learning: Relation to phasic hippocampal network events 614
Cain, D. P. Importance of behaviour in LTP research 615
Fanselow, M. S. Without LTP the learning circuit is broken 616
Gerlai, R. A causal relationship between LTP and learning? Has the question been answered by genetic approaches? 617
Gerwitz, J. C. & Davis, M. Beyond attention: The role of amygdala NMDA receptors in fear conditioning 618
Grossberg, S. Adaptive timing, attention, and movement control 619
Hara, K. & Kitajima, T. LTP plays a distinct role in various brain structures 620
Hawkins, R. D. LTP and learning: Let's stay together 620
Latash, L. P. LTP is neither a memory trace nor an ultimate mechanism for its formation: The beginning of the end of the synaptic theory of neural memory 621
Maren, S. Arousing the LTP and learning debate 622
Milner, P. M. Repetition priming: Memory or attention? 623
Moore, C. I. & Sur, M. Cortical plasticity and LTP 623
Morris, R. G. M. Preconceptions and prerequisites: Understanding the function of synaptic plasticity will also depend on a better system-level understanding of the multiple types of memory 624
O'Mara, S. M., Commins, S., Gemmell, C. & Gigg, J. Long-term potentiation: Does it deserve attention? 625
Reid, I. C. & Stewart, C. A. Stress, LTP, and depressive disorder 626
Reymann, K. G. As in long-term memory, LTP is consolidated by reinforcers 627
Robinson, G. B. Learning and synaptic plasticity 628
Rudy, J. W. & Keith, J. R. LTP and memory: Déjà vu 629
Schmajuk, N. A. Stimulus configuration, long-term potentiation, and the hippocampus 629
Shapiro, M. & Hargreaves, E. Long term potentiation: Attending to levels of organization of learning and memory mechanisms 631
Thompson, R. F. Classical conditioning has much to do with LTP 632
Vanderwolf, C. H. Hippocampus and LTP: Here we go around again 633
Walker, D. L. & Gold, P. E. NMDA receptors: Substrates or modulators of memory formation 634

Authors' Response

Shors, T. J. & Matzel, L. D. LTP: Memory, arousal, neither, both 634

Phillips, W. A. & Singer, W. In search of common foundations for cortical computation 657

Open Peer Commentary

Amit, D. J. Is synchronization necessary and is it sufficient? 683
Bower, J. M. Do the biological details matter? 684
Bugmann, G. Binding by synchronisation: A task-dependence hypothesis 685
Eckhorn, R. Support for grouping-by-synchronization, the context-field, and its mechanisms, but doubt in the use of information theory by the cortex 686
Floreano, D. An internal teacher for neural computation 687
Gregson, R. A. M. Nonlinear computation and dynamic cognitive generalities 688
Grossberg, S. Principles of cortical synchronization 689
Haase, V. G. & Diniz, L. F. M. Synchronizing oscillations: Coding by concurrence and by sequence 690
Iacoboni, M. Word recognition in the split brain and PET studies of spatial stimulus-response compatibility support contextual integration 690
König, P., Chaing, C. & von Stein, A. Internal context and top down processing 691
McCollum, G. Glossing over too much 692
Morasso, P., Sanguineti, V. & Frisone, F. Topologic organization of context fields for sensorimotor coordination 693
Niebur, E. & Usher, M. 'Tis all in pieces: (separate RFs and CFs) all coherence gone 693
Nunez, P. L. Synchronization, binding, multiscale dynamic processing, and neuron sociology 694
Palm, G. & Wennekers, T. Synchronicity and its use in the brain 695
Silverstein, S. M. & Schenkel, L. S. Schizophrenia as a model of context-deficient cortical computation 696
Smyth, D. On the normalization of coherent contrast and the semantics of synchronization 697
Stone, J. V. Information theory: The Holy Grail of cortical computation? 698
Tononi, G. & Edelman, G. M. Information: In the stimulus or in the context? 698
Treves, A. Synthesizing synchrony versus dissecting dissonance 700
Wang, D. L. On the computational basis of synchronized codes 700
Wright, J. J. Local attractor dynamics will introduce further information to synchronous neuronal fields 701
Würtz, R. P. Context dependent feature groups, a proposal for object representation 702

Authors' Response

Phillips, W. A. & Singer, W. Progress toward an understanding of cortical computation 703

Ballard, D. H., Hayhoe, M. M., Pook, P. K. & Rao, R. P. N. Deictic codes for the embodiment of cognition 723

Open Peer Commentary

Bogacz, S. Are multiple fixations necessarily deictic? 743
Bryson, J. & Lowe, W. Cognition without representational redescription 743
Damper, R. I. Connecting perception to cognition 744
Dominey, P. F. From double-step and colliding saccades to pointing in abstract space: Toward a basis for analogical transfer 745
Epelboim, J. Deictic codes, embodiment of cognition, and the real world 746
Feldman, J. A. Embodiment is the foundation, not a level 746
Findlay, J. M., Brown, V. & Gilchrist, I. D. The rhythm of the eyes: Overt and covert attentional pointing 747
Fischer, M. H. A reader's point of view on looking 748
Fuster, J. M. There is doing with and without knowing, at any rate, and at any level 748
Glenberg, A. M. Deictic codes for embodied language 749
Goodale, M. Pointing the way to a unified theory of action and perception 749
Jordan, J. S. Spatial perception is contextualized by actual and intended deictic codes 750
Jüttner, M. On learning and shift (in)variance of pattern recognition across the visual field 751
Kirlik, A. Rediscovering Turing's brain 752
Maglio, P. P. Beyond embodiment: Cognition as interactive skill 753
McGonigle, B. Pointing to see? 754
Rutkowska, J. C. Embodiment, enaction, and developing spatial knowledge: Beyond deficit egocentrism? 754
Schultz, W. Pointing with focussing devices 755
Strong, G. W. Real and virtual environments, real and virtual memory 756
Velichkovsky, B. M. On the variety of "deictic codes" 757
Wilson, R. A. Pointers, codes, and embodiment 757

Authors' Response

Ballard, D. H., Hayhoe, M. M., Pook, P. K. & Rao, R. P. N. Pointing the way 758

Continuing Commentary

On Fischer, B. & Weber, H. (1993) Express saccades and visual attention. BBS 16:553–610. 769

Bridgeman, B. Attention shuts out irrelevant stimuli 769

Authors' Response

Fischer, B. & Weber, H. Two attentional components for two purposes 770

On Feldman, A. G. & Levin, M. F. (1995) The origin and use of positional frames of reference in motor control. BBS 18:723–806 772

Dalenoort, G. J. In search of control variables: A systems approach 772

Authors' Response

Feldman, A. G. & Levin M. F. Control variables in movement production: An experimentally derived concept 773

On Koehler, J. J. (1996) The base rate fallacy reconsidered: Descriptive, normative, and methodological challenges. BBS 19:1–53. 774

Adler, J. E. If the base rate fallacy is a fallacy, does it matter how frequently it is committed? 774

Fletcher, G. J. O. Assessing the rationality of lay social inference 775

Gibbs, B. J. Evolving null hypotheses and the base rate fallacy: A functional interpretation of scientific myth 776

Goodie, A. S. Direct experience is ecologically valid 777

Macdonald, R. R. Base rates and randomness 778

Macchi, L. Pragmatically before ecologically valid tasks 778

Snow, P. Nearly Bayesian uncertain reasoning methods 779

Author's Response

Koehler, J. J. A farewell to normative null hypothesis testing in base rate research 780